A router is a networking device that forwards data packets between computer networks. Routers perform the traffic directing functions on the Internet. Data sent through the internet, such as a web page or email, is in the form of data packets. A packet is typically forwarded from one router to another router through the networks that constitute an internetwork until it reaches its destination node.

I have a customer who wants his gas regulator (that we make) to flow with "normal" litres per minute. So I need to calculate his Cv - but the flow calcs we use in-house are based on 'standard' litres per minute and I cannot find anywhere that explains the difference between 'normal' and 'standard' flow.
